

"Being a full time housewife and carer, it was good to be able to spend time with my friends whilst learning new skills on the computer which I was not familiar with before. I found it encouraging knowing that I was taking an active role in the final product and the decision making process which really boosted my confidence". Suada Bogdanić

"I had fun coming to take part in Project B: sebilj because I could spend time with my friends and family. I was very proud to learn about my country and its history from which I was forced to leave when I was two. Using recycled materials, learning new programs on computers and interacting with people of all ages was very exciting. I am looking forward to seeing the final piece and I would definitely take part in future projects of this kind". Amar Viteškić

"This project has enabled me to appreciate my heritage. Researching the history of Sebilj has highlighted our country's history to the younger participants. It is encouraging to see that even though some young people were born in England, they are still interested in learning about their roots". Amra Mekića

"Project B sebilj has enabled youngsters and the elderly to work together and share ideas to produce a sebilj, a kiosk/fountain. Traditional shapes and patterns were mixed with modern design methods to create something unique in itself. I personally, found this project interesting as it allowed the Bosnian community to come together, socialise and learn new skills". Maida Viteškić

"I have enjoyed participating in this project because it has allowed me to engage in my community and expand my knowledge and skills. The architectural model making lesson was extremely stimulating as I had never attempted anything like this before. I was really happy to share parts of my cultural history with the facilitators". Abid Kahrman
